Where Women Vote

By T. E. Powers

The big men in the country think it absolutely outrageous, a shame inexpressible, that the man who has worked and saved up little by little should demand security for his savings, and if possible, GOVERNMENT SECURITY.

NO MAN WITH A DOLLAR IN THE SAVINGS BANK COULD DRAW IT OUT.

That, in itself, was not objectionable, from a certain point of view. The savings banks must naturally INVEST the money which depositors give them. As they invest the money to bring in interest, they cannot always have it locked up in the safe.

In time of senseless panic it would, of course, be impossible for a bank to pay all of its depositors AT ONCE, for the reason that it would be impossible to get back suddenly into the bank the money lent out at interest.

But there was another feature in that panic and the savings bank deposits. Very few depositors of the savings banks knew just what their money was doing in those exciting days. As a matter of fact, THE SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITORS' MONEY, TENS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, WAS DOWN IN WALL STREET, IN THE BIG BANKS, IN THE HANDS OF THE BIG MEN, being used by them to protect themselves from just punishment, being used to hide dishonest transactions, and being used to buy dirt cheap the stocks that have now gone up in value one hundred per cent, or more.

A little savings bank man last Fall couldn't get a penny of his money. He had to wait, and he did wait. And the millions that he and tens of thousands like him had saved were down in Wall street in the hands of the big bankers, and the big speculators, and the big rascals.

Those big rascals used the money of the savings bank depositors to hide their rascality, while they scurried about and got themselves off firm ground again.

Mr. Morse is a sample of the bad savings bank; individual, of the bad banker and bad financier generally. And Mr. Pictt, doubtless a very estimable and honorable banker, is more careful than he knows when he questions the right of the government and of the people, who ARE the government, to protect themselves against such gentlemen as Morse, to demand a national postal savings bank, ready to pay dollars for dollar. EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, a bank that wouldn't hand over its funds in times of panic to bad secondhands down town, and close its front doors for thirty, or sixty, or ninety days in the face of men that put the money in.

It is truly charming to hear a banker wondering whether the government has the right "to encroach on private property."

This newspaper opposed Mr. Bryan's cracked brain scheme of bank guaranty, opposed the foolish suggestion that would make an honest banker responsible for the dishonest banker. That foolish suggestion went into the rag-bag at the last election. Banker Platt's notion that the people haven't a right to establish their own postal savings banks, the ridiculous assumption that the savings of the people are the private preserves of a few financiers, is idiotic and immodest.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

"CHAINS TRIAL OUGHT TO DO GOOD" men in the rank and file of either army or navy who would permit their wives

FROM BOSTON AMERICAN:
The trial of Captain Hanks and his brother, which is expected to be a decisive of some good even if murder trials. In their very nature are horrible. It is a great deal of influence in the future on life at army posts. There have been some cases about the army posts at Fort Hamilton when Captain and Mrs. Hanks lived there. Rumor has it that they were guilty of the same crime. It is said or prophesied people would call for justice. We hope these rumors are all false.
